

Wondertime Instant Journal

No one is grateful every single second. But we're guessing you and yours are pretty thankful most of the time. Make some notes now so that when your child becomes a teenager he'll have hard evidence of his (and your) gratitude.

Ask your child what makes him feel grateful.

When do you look at your child and feel the most love struck?

Make a list of your child's favorite:

things to do with cousins

---

---

---

---

---

kinds of pie

---

---

---

---

---

ways to say "thank you"

---

---

---

---

---

Make It Now

The classic Thanksgiving project, still beloved after all these years: Trace your child's hand below, then let her use markers or crayons to turn the outline into a turkey (the thumb is the head, the fingers are the tail feathers . . . you remember).